Internship: MentorPrize

"I worked as the Operations and Community Engagement intern [at MentorPrize] for the youth-serving non-profit, MentorPrize. This organization partners with other organizations to recruit, train, and place quality mentors and similar volunteers based on the needs for each organization. This position helped me familiarize myself with youth development and intervention efforts in the nation's Capital. With meeting with partners and attending community events, I immersed myself in the city and often worked directly with youth and community members. Now, I work in DC and MentorPrize is one of my current job's partners and continue to work with them. "

Major: Film and Digital Media, Production Concentration

Internship: The Syrian Emergency Task Force

Currently at: The Syrian Emergency Task Force

"I have so many different job opportunities in DC now. My boss and my organization are so well connected. Staying with them will help me create an insane network, but can also lead to new job possibilities. For example, I just got hired by the Swedish embassy to create a video for them and they're flying me to DC all next week to do it. I got this through a connection from my internship"

"Before DC I was going to work for the Innocence Project, doing media creation. Now, I'm moving to DC and working for the Syrian Emergency Task Force full-time in June, and will never look back. I've learned this line of work is key for my happiness, fulfillment, and growth as a professional filmmaker."

Cole Fox

Major: Legal Studies

Internship: U.S. House of Representatives

I attended briefings for staff, drafted constituent response letters and cosponsor memos, gave Capitol tours, worked with each member of the office on different tasks and/or projects, answering phones, and completed other administrative tasks. I found the experience of working in a small, fast-paced office while learning how to navigate the office dynamics and learn about how Congress works behind the scenes to be among the most rewarding aspects of my internship. I also found speaking with constituents and working with them to help solve their problems (when I was able) to be very rewarding."

"My career and life goals have not changed, but living and interning in DC opened my eyes to the East Coast, and I ended up loving the city so much that it became a big part of my decision to attend George Washington University for law school."

Research Foundation (JDRF)

"I was JDRF's government affairs intern so I'd research health policy, attend meetings with Congressmen and legislative assistants, and go to briefings on Capitol Hill. My favorite part of my internship was volunteering at the JDRF Hope Gala which took place in the National Building Museum. Over a million dollars was raised in total which really made me feel like I was a part of something so great and instrumental in eventually finding a cure. I found this work rewarding because I am a type one diabetic, so everything I did had personal importance as well as helping others with the same disease"

Major: Politics

Internship: The Office of Chairman Pete Aguilar

"I served as a congressional intern in the Office of Chairman Aguilar in the U.S. House of Representatives. In this role, I attended in-person and virtual briefings which focused on an array of policy areas. I was introduced to how policy-writing works, I aided the staffers with legislative research, and I answered constituent phone calls. Making a difference by helping constituents with their requests, and listening to their perspective on modern day political issues was a very rewarding experience. It was an honor to serve my direct community, the Inland Empire, through this internship experience."
